Vehicle Description

The MG PA was introduced in 1934 and was a development of the earlier MG J-Type. The engine was an 847cc four-cylinder version of the Morris Minor/Wolseley ohc 10hp unit and produced a lively 36bhp driving through a four-speed non-synchro gearbox.

The chassis was a stronger, longer-wheel-base version of the J-Type, with suspension by half-elliptic springs and rigid axles front and rear. Around 2,000 cars were produced in total before the 939cc PB was introduced in 1935 - production ending in 1936.

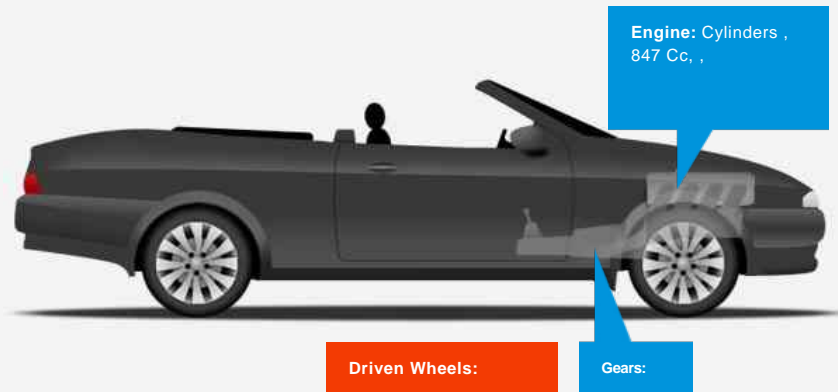

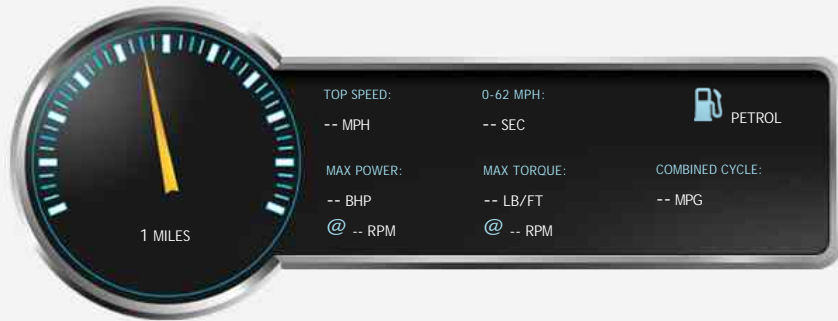

BHY 879 was originally a 2-seater bought by the Butler family in 1935 and used in period for sporting trials with photographs on file. Little is known of its subsequent history until it re-surfaced in 1972 and
